

RASPY COAXER™ Model No. 323

Predator Call

• Jackrabbit Screams
for long range

• Rodent Squeals
to coax 'em closer

A combination long-range call and close-in coaxer. Simply blow into the call to reproduce the raspy scream of the jackrabbit for long distances. Cover the end of the call and continue blowing to reproduce the whimpers and whines of injured rodents.

IMPORTANT: Please Read all instructions and warnings before using this product to ensure proper and safe use.

INSTRUCTIONS & EXERCISES

JACKRABBIT

Place the call in the "v" between your thumb and index finger. Close your fingers around the call, forming a loose fist and covering the side voice of the call with one finger (Diagram 1). By opening and closing your fist as you call, you reproduce life-like sounds of a distressed jackrabbit.

Diagram 1 Side Voice

Whines - Hold the call as described above and gently blow into the call. Each call is about 2 - 3 seconds in length. Blow emotionally in a series for 10 - 15 seconds.

Screams - A jackrabbit's distress scream is loud, continuous and uncontrolled. Each call is about 2 - 3 seconds in length. Blow loudly and emotionally for 10 - 15 seconds, pause briefly and then repeat. Use the scream to gain the predator's interest from both long or short distances.

SQUEAKER

Hold the call with your thumb and middle finger. With your index finger, cover the hole in the end as you blow into the call (Diagram 2).

Diagram 2

Whines - Hold the call as described above and gently blow into the call. Each call is about 1 second long. Blow emotionally in a series for 10 - 15 seconds.

Screams - A rodent's distress scream is loud, continuous and uncontrolled. Each call is about 2 - 3 seconds in length. Hold the call as described above. Blow in a series for 10 - 15 seconds, pause for 15 seconds, and then repeat. Use the distress scream to gain the predator's interest from both long and short distances.
