

FIGHTIN' HORNS™

Model No. 710

Buck Fights - Big and Small Design - Protects your Hands

Always hunt into the wind while rattling. With their keen sense of smell, even a rutting buck won't be foolish enough to be rattled up after he smells you. Move to the edge of a core area very quietly and "set-up" next to some brush or a large tree to break up your outline. Wait 10-15 minutes to let things settle down before beginning. Grunt before, during and after you rattle the horns.

INSTRUCTIONS & EXERCISES

Grasp the Fightin' Horns by the handles. Face the tines upward toward each other and hold the horns about a foot apart (See Diagram).

Light Fights or Sparring - Lightly brush the horns together to reproduce the sounds made by younger bucks as they spar. A sparring match between young bucks will last from 30 seconds to 5 minutes. Young bucks spar from early fall through the end of the season, when their antlers are hard and free of velvet. For effectiveness repeat sparring every 10 minutes.

Major Fights or The Dominant Fight - When you reproduce this fight, you are telling the dominant buck that two other bucks are fighting over his territory and he will come looking for them. Grunt 4-5 times. Bring the horns sharply together making a sudden clashing sound. Bucks will lock in combat and try to get into position to overpower one another. To simulate old bucks fighting, intertwine the points of the Fightin' Horns, twisting and grinding them against each other. Continue for 10-30 seconds then jerk the horns sharply apart like two bucks disengaging their antlers. During a fight, there is a great deal of heavy breathing, grunting, stomping, etc., so be sure to add these sounds to make your fight as real as possible.

Immediately after jerking the horns apart, rapidly thump the ground with the back of the horns about 3-5 times. Rake a nearby bush while thumping the ground to mix both sounds. Wait 1-2 minutes, watching very closely for any movement, then repeat the sequence, but don't bring the antlers together as sharply. Simply grind and click for 10-20 seconds. Again repeat thumping. End the sequence with a gentle clicking and grinding for another 5-10 seconds. Watch closely and have your gun or bow ready. Wait 5-10 minutes and repeat the entire sequence. Remain seated for 15-20 minutes to allow any sneakers to come in. Dominant fights last 1-20 minutes. For effectiveness repeat every 20 minutes.
